Riding Hobbyhorses has become exceedingly popular over the past few years, in the internet and on field. Enthusiastic hobbyhorse riders make stick horses for themselves and for sale, and at their best those horses show superior craftsmanship. A true enthusiast will own dozens of them. The hobbyhorse equestrians practice riding their horses, shoot videos displaying them and organize camps and derbys for them, up to national championships in Finland. Hobbyhorses compete in a whole range of equestrian mastery, from show jumping to high jump and medieval riding.

HOBBYHORSE EQUESTRIANS is the first book on hobbyhorses and the culture around them. It tells you how to breed your own horses, what you can do with them and how much fun it is! For the more mature reader it allows a view of enchanting and true empowerment, what its like to create a world of your own and have total, sovereign control over it.

Lucia Stenger is an enthusiastic equestrian, both with hobbyhorses and regular ones. She has her own hobbyhorse stable lussentalli.weebly.com, @lussentalli in Instagram. Sinimaaria Kangas is a writer, who rides for fun, mostly with stickless horses, with her daughter Lucia.
